A Note on the Author

John Lennard took a B.A. and D.Phil. at Oxford University, and an M.A. at Washington University in St Louis. He has taught for the Universities of London, Cambridge, and Notre Dame, the Open University, and Fairleigh Dickinson University on-line; and was from 2004–09 Professor of British & American Literature at the University of the West Indies–Mona in Jamaica. His publications include But I Digress: The Exploitation of Parentheses in English Printed Verse (Clarendon Press, 1991); The Poetry Handbook (1996; 2/e, OUP, 2005); with Mary Luckhurst The Drama Handbook (OUP, 2002); and a precursor to this volume, Of Modern Dragons and other essays on Genre Fiction (2007). He has also written HEB Literature Insights on Shakespeare's Hamlet and King Lear, Paul Scott's Raj Quartet, and Nabokov's Lolita, and is General Editor of the HEB Genre Fiction Sightlines series, for which he has written on Reginald Hill, Walter Mosley, Octavia E. Butler, Ian McDonald, and Tamora Pierce. The Case of Ronald Merrick: Class, Moral Judgement, and the Raj, a detailed study of Scott's Raj and its reception, will be published later this year by HEB, with a Reader's Guide to the Quartet.

You have been reading a free micro-ebook from Humanities-Ebooks LLP.

Humanities-Ebooks is a non-profit making publisher, or if you prefer, an authors' co-operative. This means that instead of fixed royalties at 5 to 10%, it distributes 100% of net profit to authors and editors.

Humanities-Ebooks welcomes proposals for new or revised monographs, essay collections, digitized journal contents (provided that digitization is for the benefit of the author rather than the publisher), scholarly editions, and other academic titles. It also publishes the exciting new student-oriented series Humanities Insights—in History, Literature and Philosophy.
